Exodus Announces Release of Browser Extension

Users can now access Web3 with the new multi-chain DeFi solution

Exodus Movement, Inc. (tZERO and Securitize ATS:EXOD), (“the Company”) the leading self-custodial cryptocurrency software platform, today announced that customers now have the ability to access Web3 via the new Exodus browser extension.

“Our multi-chain browser extension provides a gateway to the world of Web3,” said JP Richardson, CEO and Co-Founder. “Customers can send, receive, exchange, stake and HODL cryptocurrency, use dApps, and expand their NFT collection all within the Exodus Web3 wallet. It already includes support for Solana and Ethereum and was built from the ground up with safety, ease-of-use, and beautiful design in mind.”

Exodus customers can now sync, manage and grow their wealth across multiple platforms, including mobile, desktop, and the Web3 wallet. The new, multi-chain browser extension brings the world of Web3 to customers through its easy-to-use interface.

Exodus is the first to offer both Solana and Ethereum within its Web3 wallet; support for Algorand is expected to launch by September 15. The Company expects to release support for other major DeFi chains, including Binance Smart Chain, Polygon, Fantom, and Avalanche later this year.

“Our goal is to simplify the world of DeFi for everyone,” said JP Richardson, CEO and Co-Founder. “We continue to create useful and beautiful products through all market cycles; Exodus’ Web3 wallet embodies our commitment to help the world exit traditional finance.”
